Left-Handed Tibbatts.

Some years ago, in Kentucky, two sisters, friends and relatives, but of opposite politics, offered themselves for Congress in the same district.

The Whig candidate was W. W. Southgate, the Democrat, T. W. Tibbatts. Both had talent, wit and the ability to please people, in the more intelligent parts of the district they acted honorably and as accomplished debaters. But in those regions where the people were ignorant, they and jokers at each other, and made the people laugh.

It happened that in one of these "dumb" regions both had made such a favorable impression that public sentiment was about equally divided. One party cried, "Hurrah for Southgate!" the other, "Hurrah for Tibbatts!" The people remained, of course, undecided.

The two politicians had ridden out at a rate, Tibbatts suddenly discovered that he had left something behind him, so went back, distracting his opponent, waited a while and then returned. He found Tibbatts playing cards and the people dancing. The sentiment seemed to be all in favor of the fiddler, who played with his left hand.

Southgate, who also played the violin, with his right hand, told the dancer that he would assist his friend Tibbatts. Southgate, distrusting his opponent, waited a while and then returned. He found Tibbatts playing cards and the people dancing. The sentiment seemed to be all in favor of the fiddler, who played with his left hand.

The next day Southgate was taken ill and for two weeks Tibbatts had the best of himself. Southgate, on recovering, followed his opponent's canvas, but said that his rival's stories and violin playing had stolen the hearts of the voters.

In one place they refused to hear Tibbatts, crying, "Tibbatts? Is our man?" "Hurrah for Tibbatts!" Some never went so far as to advise Southgate to give up the canvas and go home, as that would receive every vote in that place.

"Fellow-citizens," said Southgate, riding on his most honest air, "Tibbatts is a dear friend of mine, and a good fellow—there is no better man in the district."

"Let me hear Southgate!" shouted some of the crowd, "he seems like a great fellow." And others said, "Yes, Mr. Southgate, until the politicians and I don't go to Congress without abiding by your friend Tibbatts, I will stay at home." He is the most talented man in Kentucky, and for accomplishments he isn't equal in the world!"

"We know all about that," shouted one, "We heard him play."

"But, fellow-citizens, there is one thing I cannot approve in my friend, He plays better left-hand than most musicians with their right. But if you should hear him play right-handed! He could bend the trees with his sweet song."

"When he is among the aristocrats, when he is among the aristocrats, when he is among the uneducated people, he plays right-handed. But when he is among common people, the uneducated, for whom he has no regard, and calls jackasses, he says anything is good enough for them, and he plays for them left-handed."

"What! Why, he plays left-handed too!" exclaimed the crowd, now thoroughly angry. "Does he think we are asses? Down with Tibbatts!" Up with Southgate! He's our man!"

When the election returns came in, poor left-handed Tibbatts found that he lost but sixteen votes in that precinct.

Eccentric Winans.

Mr. Winans, son of the late Baltimore millionaire, lived in great splendor at 10th and University, one of the most magnificent palaces in London, and, with one exception, the finest deer park in England, which is kept in royal style. He has a morbid dread of the sea, and says nothing would tempt him to cross it again, and neither of his two sons has ever been in America. His income is nearly $1,000,000, with a prospect of trebling in ten years. He spends his money en prime, but himself cares for nothing but engineering.

The Abe List.

Notwithstanding some reports to the contrary, List is robust and vigorous. He rises as early as 5 or 5:30 o'clock, takes extended walks and is still a hard worker. While he is often viewed to death, he has a pleasant smile for every visitor. No wonder he is so popular.

He is a slender old and young alike turn to observe him as he goes on his way, lifting his hat every few moments in recognition of some acquaintances. Even the domestics speak of him as "the dear master," for he has benefited so many in one way, or another that every one loves him.

From 4 to 6 o'clock, on three days of the week he gives gratuitous lessons to young artists. When a wealthy person gives a large sum of money to a good cause, generally much ado is made of it, though it caused him no effort nor perceptible loss; but what can we say when a man—the greatest of all ages in his art—gives of his precious time the amount of one day's labor each week for the benefit of young pianists? The word generosity does not cover such a deed. But List is generous in money matters, too. Recently the kindergarten here celebrated the 100th anniversary of Froebel's birthday (Froebel, originator of the kindergarten system), List, who was present, was much pleased and at the last day sent a very complimentary letter to the teacher, who had been a faithful worker here for over thirty years, expressing his appreciation of the rhythmic precision as shown by the little ones in their exercises, and enclosing a bank note of 100 marks.

Among his students there are some fine young artists. Now and then some presumption and conceit and vainglory exist mainly in the imagination, call on the master, with the intent of becoming his pupil. I happened to be present at such a time. The kind-hearted master made many corrections and even played several pages of the piece to the would-be virtuous, but at last, when he could endure it no longer, he informed the aspiring youth that the air outside would be better for him. Well, I suppose the young man considered it an honor even to be "kicked out" by List.

Mental Strain.

There can be no room to question the extreme peril of "overwork" to growing children and youths with undeveloped brains. The excessive use of an immature organ arrests its growth, and constricts it in work. What happens to horses which are allowed to run races too early happens to boys and girls who are overworked at school.

USEFUL HINTS.

In removing grease spots from carpets, make a lather of hard soap; use only cold, soft water and rub the soap from the carpet with a clean dampened cloth.

If you have a screw rusted into wood, or a bolt that will not readily turn, pour on it a little kerosene, and let it remain. In a little while it will penetrate the interstices so the screw can be easily started.

NEVER set the lamp upon a red table-cover; if you can not find time to make a green lamp mat, put a piece of green card-board under the lamp and you will find the reflection upon your work much more agreeable to the eyes than that from the red cover.

The little boxes of thin wood which are used to carry butter or lard in, when covered with cataline or silk, make pretty work-boxes. Small peach baskets, painted and lined with a bright color, are ornamental and convenient, besides affording the satisfaction which comes from making something from nothing.

To make bacon preserves: Use English bacon, four onions, one of cloves, half a dozen musks, five grains, best spirits of wine, six ounces. Mix the oil of lavender with a little of the spirit first, then add the other ingredients, and let it stand, being kept well corked for at least two months before it is used, shaking it frequently.

A LADY writes to a contemporary as follows: A way for brushing the smoke from lamp chimneys and the cinders from the burner is very convenient; they're more all the grease, and there will be no drops standing upon the chimneys, like water on a duck's back, and so you need no wiping. There is a reason of this, as you all know, needs so much washing after one commences. I wash mine with soap, to remove all the grease, in the dish water; before I put in my dishes; rinse in the rinsing water and all is done. Soap never has made my chimney brittle, perhaps it is because it is removed quickly; I never have found that soap made glass brittle.

An informal meeting of the city council was held last afternoon in the council chamber to consider the finances.

The person who took the tie strap and weight out of the sole water man's sleigh (Mr. West) will cover his return by returning it.

A. M. Peterson reports the sale of some 20 lots on the Johnson estate at an average of $2.00 per lot; this looks like a revival in real estate.

Rev. Mr. Williams will conduct the morning services in the Presbyterian Church on Sabbath next, and the Rev. Mr. McDonald in the evening.

Messrs. Miller & Ross have received a large consignment of furniture including chairs, sofas, bureaus, chinos, etc., for which the express charge alone was $500.

Winter Bros. have received a consignment comprising one car load of beef and mutton from Ontario and sells on commission at very low prices. Farmers from the country should give them a call.

Mr. G. L. Ferguson, the proprietor of the Skating Rink, is making arrangements for a grand carnival, on the 25th inst. Now that the skaters have had a reasonable time for practice, it may be safely anticipated that the affair will be a success.

The fire and light committee sat in the city chambers, and decided to try the street lamp yesterday afternoon, but owing to the intensity of the cold the thing was next to impossible. However, it is the intention of the authorities to look to this matter as soon as it is practicable to do so.

Teamsters have been in the habit of crossing their teams over the side walk on the east side of Seventh street until now, where they crossed is bodily snatched up, an irregularity in the by-laws prevents the penalties of the law being inflicted. However it is to be hoped before the council at their meeting on Monday night.

Copies of the petition that appeared in the MAIL last week, and which is to be presented to the Hon. the Minister of the Interior, praying for the adoption of measures facilitating the granting and securing of patents for honestees, are in the hands of Mr. Barr and Wallis, Ramsay & Co. awaiting signatures.

THURSDAY.—Owing to an oversight the name of Miss Philpott was omitted from the account of the concert, she having rendered material assistance by presiding at the piano in her well known and accomplished manner, and among them one instance when the grand within three inches of the steppipe was half burned away. To sit in her work, which he intends thoroughly looking after, he would be favored by any one who may chance to see a case of carelessness displayed in tampering with the fiery element, to report to him at his office, (the informants name of course being kept quiet,) whereby he will be better able to see that everything endangered by fire is removed, and the city will not be continually in dread of the flames.

A train with four passenger coaches attached arrived at the depot at 10 o'clock last night with a body of railroad hands from the end of the track. On arriving they all made a raid on the nearest hotel which proved to be the Harris House and indulged to their hearts content. Mr. Lester, the gaffer of the squad was interred, and reports the weather at Swift Current some days ago was so cold that one was able to work in shirt sleeves, and the thermometer has not been lower than 30 degrees below zero in winter. It always is a good farming country with good water and bush at a distance of 20 miles.

from the radio d. and he thinks a great many settlers will pour in there in the early spring.

The party at the Royal Hotel, last night, was a decided success in every particular. The genial face of Mr. Wm. Leadbetter, as he stood behind the bar attending to the wants of the many participants in the night's amusement, spoke in language plainer than words, how things were going. The Royal is a first-class hotel in every particular, and the last evening was only another feather in the cap of its urban operators. After a most enjoyable evening had been spent, at which drunkenness was conspicuously absent, the party broke up at a reasonable hour, vowing that the Royal, under its present management, was in perfect keeping with the prosperity of our city.
